

Memory Art

Last semester, the Art Club participated in the Memory Project, a social outreach program in which art students create portraits for children who have been abandoned, abused, orphaned, or neglected. Members of the Art Club received digital photos of five children from an orphanage in Burma and spent two months reproducing the pictures in colorful pastel chalks. They sent the laminated portraits and personal notes back to the children for them as a special keepsake and memory of their childhood. We had a great time making the portraits, and we look forward to hearing back from these children. This semester, the Art Club has already started planning our next community project; creating a large painting for the library.
